New York Tribune. Growing Demand for Electric Motors. The uses of the electric motor are multiplying daily, and one of the indications that its adaptability is recognized by the public is that machines for both constant potential and constant current systems have been manufactured during the past year at the rate of upward of 250 per week, and their rating will exceed 700 horse power. In spite of this great output of electrical apparatus, every portion of it finds an immediate sale, and nearly all the factories are behind in their orders to such an extent that it is nearly impossible to fill orders under sixty days. Motors have been introduced for all conceivable purposes to which power can be applied, and small industries run by electrical power have started up in many places where steam power could not have been utilized.

The use of the storage battery is also growing rapidly.—New York Telegram.

Violets sell in New York and some other cities nowadays for $1.50 a bunch. There are about fifty violets in a bunch. Notwithstanding the price there is a great demand for them, and florists say there would still be considerable sales if they were $10 a bunch. In every florist's contribute to the comforts of a home, and still but they are certainly dangerous. The establishment there are men and girls employed whose-chief work is to fasten artificial stems on flowers intended for harily flowers do not require much bandling, but, owing to its frail stem, every violet must have a support, even for a violet must have a support, even for a small bouquet. This is one reason why violets come so high. The end of a bit of fine florist's wire is inserted into the flower from below and twirled around the stem. It takes a good while to pre-pare a very small bunch for sale.—New York Letter.

Cronk, a Chicago lawyer who was convicted of the crime of perjury in 1888 and seny tenced to the Joliet prison for one year, took effect today. Cronk has never been confined in the penitentiary, but ever since his conviction has been allowed to remain in the Chicago jail. As the pardon was directed to the warden of the prison, it became necessary for the prisoner to be at least brought to the prison before he could be legally discharged from custody. Sheriff Matson, of Cook county, brought Cronk to Joliet today, having the pardon in his pocket. The prisoner was turned over to the warden, who gave the sheriff his receipt.
